

Guess the Weight of Mars!

This chocolate-filled<sup>1</sup> Fun-Sized Mars<sup>2</sup> will be presented<sup>3</sup> to the fan who guesses<sup>4</sup> closest to its weight<sup>5</sup>!

50p per guess!

Special offer!

£2 will get you four guesses<sup>6</sup>!

All proceeds go to funding

Satellite 3

1. The Celestial Bureaucracy does not guarantee that the Fun-Sized Mars does not contain some air as well<sup>a</sup>.
2. Fun-Sized Mars does not contain actual Fun-Sized Mars. Actual contents are an unspecified number of Mars eggs<sup>b</sup>.
3. Announcement of the winner and presentation to take place at the Closing Ceremony.
4. To prevent potential clashes, no two contestants are to choose<sup>c</sup> the same weight. Please specify weights to four significant figures<sup>d</sup>.
5. As weighed by highly accurate calibrated laboratory balance.
6. Offer not valid in Åland Islands, Northern Mariana Islands, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, and United States Minor Outlying Islands<sup>e</sup>.

- a. The Celestial Bureaucracy cannot guarantee that the Fun-Sized Mars contains any actual fun.
- b. Mars eggs<sup>i</sup> may contain traces of nuts, or other signs of madness. Contents may be Martian<sup>ii</sup>.
- c. Nor may three contestants choose the same weight, nor four either. Five is right out...
- d. As in, write a weight like "1.234 kg" or "1234 g" on the sheet provided. Do not seek out four Hugo winners to inform of your guess<sup>iii</sup>.
- e. Sorry. But then, you're not in any of those places...

- i. The Celestial Bureaucracy cannot guarantee that Mars eggs will hatch, and does not recommend that they be incubated under any circumstances.
- ii. The Celestial Bureaucracy would like to point out that "may be" is a very loose term.
- iii. The Celestial Bureaucracy would like to apologise for the quality of that joke.